Director Identification Number

ABRS
Australian Business
Registry Services

In an attempt to prevent fraudulent and unlawful behaviour when a company is wound up e.g. illegal phoenix activities, and, to make it easier for external administrators and regulators to trace directors' relationships with companies over time, the government now requires every company director to obtain a director ID. This will begin in November 2021. The ID is a unique identifier that is applied for once and is owned by a director forever.

A director will need to apply for his own ID himself - this cannot be done by someone else on his/her behalf. Application instructions can be found on the Australian Business Registry Services \(ABRS\) website.

Once you have your director ID, you need to share it with your company corporation record-holder. This may be your company secretary, another director, contact person or an authorised agent of the company.

To find out further details about obtaining a director ID, go to the ABRS website.
